Colour Coding in The Library

The Library arranges its books according to the Dewey Decimal System, which is a widely used way of arranging resources into subject areas. It uses the number range 000-999 to represent different subjects. Resources in subjects containing the number range 000-999 are represented in different subject areas.

Look for the colour corresponding to the number of the item you need to help you find its location on the shelves.

Work in a group?

- The ground, first and second floors are designated group study areas.
